Architectural analysis and interpretation of the Maison de Fourni in Delos

Abstract

The Maison de Fourni in Delos has been discovered a century ago and represents a very particular type of house in the delian environment, with an urban part richly decorated and furnished, and an agricultural part which has been recently excavated. The presentation will focus on the architectural analysis of the house, and will explore various possibilities of restitution as well as the historical perspective of this early example of what can be identified as a villa in hellenistic Delos.
